Words from Father Rob Kinnally

Nico, God and Heaven

From the pulpit last weekend, I promised a column about the possible capital campaign for Saint Aloysius, but when of the passing of Nico Mallozzi, a religious education student, my thoughts and prayers took a different way.

When something like the loss of one so young breaks out together forever in that place prepared for each one of us if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come back again and carry you home.

God has loved Nico from the time before he was conceived and blessed him throughout his joyful life on earth. And now Nico sees the God who loves him every day, and the hug probably never end.

Heaven is the place where there is no more worry, sickness or death. Heaven is the place where the angels sing all day long in support of us. From Heaven comes the love of Mary, who stood by the cross of her Son, and Joseph, strong in faith and sister, and all who love them.

When faced with the challenge of such sadness, a community of faith comes together to pray, and from our prayer the healing has begun. Thank you for your loving support of the Mallozzi family. Please keep praying for them, for children and families everywhere, and for one another. We will keep you informed of any needs.

Our prayers in Christ,
Father Rob
